

Botanical Sketching

Explore our beautiful Derek Jarman Garden, inspired by the artist and film-maker's coastal garden in Dungeness. Participants will investigate the wonders of this intricate garden and learn about the exotic flora it is home to. Through observational botanical drawings and experimental and creative approaches to engaging with our green space, we will uncover the garden's beauty in our serene space in the middle of the urban landscape and vast concrete building.

Activities include drawing with your wrong hand, with your eyes closed, with your elbows or toes, or working in a pair or as part of a group. Botanical Sketching helps you to connect with each other, be active and enjoy being outdoors and with nature. Participants will learn tools to develop focus, concentration and teamwork, as well as gather an awareness and appreciation of the benefits of the many green spaces that populate the city. Flowers could be your 'cheerful, delightful, affectionate companions', as horticulturist and avid gardener Horace J. Wright once wrote, or they could help you to create your over-the-rainbow place to escape to. How will the colourful Derek Jarman garden change your world?

Making Miniatures

First installed at Bold Tendencies in 2013, the Derek Jarman Garden is filled with unique handcrafted sculptures inspired by those found in Jarman's own coastal setting. Choosing to support and celebrate the surrounding environment, Jarman created his sculptures from local materials including seashore-rusted metal and wind-twisted wood, decorating his garden with wonderful items that reflected the life of the Kentish shoreline.

This workshop introduces participants to Jarman's humble and careful artistry. Together we will explore what we find when we are out in the garden, homing in on the intricate designs of this coastal landscape. Using local recycled materials participants will design their very own small sculptures that will be added to the scenery of the garden, uncovering skills that participants didn't know they had, and teaching children how being creative can help support your environment. It will encourage participants to reconnect with the outside, and the joy and discovery to be found in garden spaces.

Skyline Sketching

Bold Tendencies has a unique and spectacular panoramic view of the whole of London, from Canary Wharf to the London Eye and Big Ben, all the way round to Crystal Palace. See if you can spot the Shard, the Gherkin, St Paul's Cathedral and more, all from our special vantage in the heart of Peckham!

Utilising our access to one of the best rooftop views in London, this creative workshop will use our view as a means for activities that will remind participants of the spectacular city they live in and encourage them to think beyond the horizon of the city and claim a sense of home in the bustling skyline.

Skyline Sketching will encourage you to uncover your own stories through collaborative observational drawing of the skyline. We will work from memory, life and imagination to explore London's iconic architectural landscape. Participants will create drawings by focusing on areas of particular interest in the London silhouette, exploring how light and shadow can change the mood and tone of your creations!

All Around Agora

Imagine a large scale playground, finally giving you the freedom to run wild and explore space. With a longing to be outside, we invite participants to exercise their regained freedom, through physical games, play and fun!

Commissioned in 2015, Richard Wentworth's Agora is made up of shiny, silver lines that cover the entire surface of the car park. In Games & Playtime we invite children to respond to the work through physical games. We will move through space in new and unusual ways: hiding, stretching, playing... engaging with the artwork through our own performance and actions.

We use the work of Richard Wentworth as a starting point. Together we will share ideas around what it means to be free, to move and play outdoors. We will explore ideas around social engagement and wellbeing. Groups will adapt and remix well known games, or create new games to be played within the space — with the added challenges of being socially distanced and strategically moving around sculptures and art on site.
